The Big Bang – Oneness – Wholeness

by Ann McGill - Potentialist

Once upon a time there was a "Big Bang".
All matter and all life emerged from this single cosmic birth.
This means that everything in the entire universe has the same origin, which means that EVERYTHING is INTERCONNECTED.
Every tree, bird and planet is part of a single, stupendous whole;
you and I and everything known and unknown had the SAME ORIGINAL SOURCE BEGINNING.

Something similar happens on a smaller scale every time a new baby is conceived. At the big bang moment when a woman's egg is fertilized, all parts of the body come into existence in that instant; though it takes 9 months for distinguishable hands and feet, heart and organs to manifest into observable physical form. The infant's appendages are not separate entities, but rather are aspects of a single, unified whole body.

In other words, THE UNIVERSE IS AN INSEPARABLE WHOLE, a vast web of interacting, seemingly disparate entities that share a common origin. This wholeness includes us, the observer. Most of us fragment the world into component parts, ignoring the interconnectedness of all things. It is this thinking that is the root cause of many of our social and environmental ills. Once enough of us understand that WHATEVER AFFECTS THE WHOLE AFFECTS EVERY SINGLE ONE OF US to some degree, we can begin to solve some of the problems that have long plagued mankind.

In the scientific community there is the well known saying ...

“WHEN A BUTTERFLY FLAPS ITS WINGS IN JAPAN A TORNADO APPEARS IN NEW YORK CITY.”

We are all affected, by everything, including what we can't see and don't understand.
